

This avalanche in the second yellowmule off Buck Ridge was likely triggered by a snowmobiler today. It was on a steep wind-loaded slope (northeast facing) and the avalanche propagated a few hundred feet wide. A layer of small faceted crystals was the likely culprit. This layer is on many slopes. Photo: TJ Krob

Advisory Region
Northern Madison

Forecast link: GNFAC Avalanche Advisory for Sun Mar 11, 2012GNFAC Avalanche Advisory for Mon Mar 12, 2012

Northern Madison, 2012-03-10