

Small avalanches on small slopes are dangerous. This photo was taken in 2004 on the approach to the ice climb on the north face of Sphinx Mountain. The slab is thin, but could easily sweep a person off a cliff. This photo was taken a week or so before the avalanche that killed two climbers on a nearby, similar sized slope. Photo: Jim Earl

Advisory Region
Southern Madison
Southern Madison, 2012-10-25